Barbie

A Day at the Fair

By Carol Pugliano-Martin

It was a big day!
Barbie was already dressed.
But Kelly was still in bed.

“Time to get up!”
said Barbie.

“We are going
to the fair!”

Kelly jumped out of bed.

“Oh, boy!” she said.

“I will ride
the Ferris wheel
all by myself!”

Barbie helped Kelly
get dressed.

“The Ferris wheel
is pretty big,” she said.

“Maybe I should
ride it with you.”

“No, thank you,”
said Kelly.

“I can ride by myself.”

When they got
to the fair,
Kelly ran to
the Ferris wheel.

She looked up, up, up
at the Ferris wheel.

It was very big.

And very tall!

“Are you ready to ride
the Ferris wheel?”
asked Barbie.

“Not yet,” said Kelly.

Kelly and Barbie
saw a lady
making cotton candy.
They each had a
fluffy pink cone.

“Are you ready to ride
the Ferris wheel?”
asked Barbie.

“Not yet,” said Kelly.

Kelly and Barbie
went inside
the animal tent.
Kelly oinked at a pig.

She petted a cow.

She even fed hay
to a goat.

They went back outside.

“Are you ready to ride
the Ferris wheel?”

asked Barbie.

“Not yet,” said Kelly.

Kelly went
on a pony ride.
She waved to Barbie.

“Are you ready to ride
the Ferris wheel now?”
asked Barbie.

“Not yet,” said Kelly.

Kelly and Barbie watched
the Ferris wheel
go around and around.

The children
riding on it
were smiling.

“Kelly, do you want
me to ride with you?”
asked Barbie.

“Yes!” said Kelly.

She and Barbie got onto
the Ferris wheel.

At first,
Kelly felt afraid.
She shut her eyes.
Barbie held her close.
They went up, up, up.

At the top,
Kelly opened her eyes.
She had never been
so high up before!
She could see
the whole fair.
“Wow!” said Kelly.
“This is fun!”

The Ferris wheel
went down, down, down.
Soon the ride was over.
“I want to ride again!”
said Kelly.

And that is just what Barbie and Kelly did.
